

Keeping accurate vehicle records just became a lot less taxing

We understand that most real estate agents are required to maintain auditable records of vehicle-related business travel for taxation return purposes. Until now, this has been an arduous and generally 'hit and miss' process with the hope that the accountant will assist with 'filling in the gaps' at the end of each financial year. This approach is not only expensive in terms of accounting time but also inaccurate, leading to the potential for a failed ATO audit. The GPS Logbook overcomes these problems by simply plugging into the vehicle cigarette lighter outlet and logging all vehicle travel. The data from the unit can then be downloaded via an internet portal which displays the data in an easily understood format allowing the user to allocate journeys to 'private' or 'business'. Importantly, all data is stored for at least 5 years. A range of reports can be generated, including detailed information for taxation purposes as well as the information required by businesses for those individuals submitting vehicle-related expense claims.
